The Fate of Mormoniana It would be a tare phenomenon in history if such a system as Mormonism should long survive in contact with civilization. The clements of weakness inherent in all organized forms of corruption have all along been specially apparent in this. Harmony has been preserved for many years, so far as outside observation could discover, by the commanding influence and controlling will of Brigham Young. Being far-sighted enough to see that contact with modern views and usages, under the auspices of Christian Institutions, is necessarily fatal to the perpetuity of the social customs of Mormonism, it has been his plan to keep the Schuts reparate from the rest of the world.

Not by observing the Apostolic maxim, that, while in the world, the Sainta should not be of the world, has Brigham sought to effect a spiritual and moral distinction between the chosen, people and the non-elect, lost by living apart, where the manners and morals of the Gentile world would be powciless to produce allegations and secessions from the code by which he has designed to govern the Church. Utah, by its isolation in the heart of a region supposed to be insecassible to the emigrating crowd of frontiersmen, has long afforded a secure retreat for the prosecution of his hopes of gathering the electimo one body apart from the rest of mankind

By one of those strange modes in which providential purposes are effected, the Mormon settlement was made in the very region l through which the great routs of travel to the Pacific States must necessarily pres; tion by Congress at its coming session of a and the vast enterprise of a railroad to the Territorial government for our recently ac-Pacific coast takes its direct course through the valley where these people have made an for the position of Territorial Governor have inhospitable desert blossom like a ganlen.-The immense number of emigrants crossing the country have made Salt Lake City a ligence of the total loss of the U.S. stemmer halting place, and their intercause with the people has been far from confroning them in their love for the degraded system under which they have lived. Disconteat has been visible in many of the men, but especially is the women of the community.

The recent development of a sect opposes to the polygany which is a prominent and most degrading feature of the system, is one of the strongest possible proofs of the demoralized condition of the community, and the departure of a large number of them with their families on account of it, is that distinctive features of Mormonism shall have in that way sgainst future strikes. disappeared.

Isolation is as far from the normal condition of the life of a State as of an individual, and there is in all minds a bond of union with the brotherhood of men. In this alone is sufficient reason for believing that this system counct be perpetuated, apart from those mental and physical facts in burnanlife and society which make it equally impossible. However long Mormonism thay continue as a religious system, it must better forth assume some aspects different from those it has heretofore presented.

The President in New England. Mr. Johnson has left the land of the Puritans bearing with him whatever impressions he may have received from his brief latercourse with the people of New England as seen by him in person upon their native soil. He passed unvisited what we Rhode Islanders esteem the fairest portion of this svetion, and without placing foot within the ed freedom has prevailed from the first. He has thus failed to witness the fullest results and the completest development of that persound liberty of which the Paritan (aith was the exponent.

characteristic of the New England people who are so frequently described as cold and phlegmatic: - and Mr. Johnson, whatever prejudices he may have entertained when he came among us, cannot have failed to be convinced that there is as much warmth of hospitality and arder of patriotism here as elsewhere. Indied, in his speeches, he repeatedly expressed the opinion that prejudice and lack of implies a maintance causmost of the differences and estrangements among the people of various sections.

It is much to be regretted if the President returns to Washington with the feeling that the courtesies extended to him were evidence of change in the pathle mind, relative to the two policies that have been attempted by Congress and binaseli for the reconstruction his return to Washington, in reference to the District Commande so in which he may be inductived by his large visit. Nothing could be farther from the truth than to supprise that anything said or describille, he was here is to be construct in a provided his opposition to flase officity of of their removal, should it take place.

The Massachase 23 officials have pursue the right course in heading the President while uttering to word in approbation of Mr. Johnson's policy. A difficult programme could not have been more skillfully carried out; reads in possible for a multitale to treat more as attended one whose whole rolley that do bly disapproved. Mr Johnson appears to have appreciated these facts; and as he becomes, the credit must be accorded him of baying home himself with corresponding courtest and a produce of speech which, judging from former occasions, we were hardly really to expect.
